

Employment

American Society for Engineering Education – Washington DC (May 2004 – present) IT Program Manager

- IT lead on NSF Graduate Research Fellowship Program
- Develop intranet applications using MySQL, Cold Fusion and Ruby on Rails

White House Military Office - Washington DC (April 2001 - May 2004) IT Program Manager

- Advisor on whitehouse.gov team
- Responsible for White House Military Office intranet site
- Project Manager for internet technology projects

Office of the Secretary of Defense Quality Management Office - Arlington, Virginia (1997 to April 2001) Deputy Director of Web Operations

- Responsible for all aspects of web site content and web site development
- Created web applications and managed others creating web applications
- Led the operations and technical development team of the Interactive Customer Evaluation (ICE) program. ICE improves management decision making through the use of internet technology, see: icelink.disa.mil
- Substantially improved on existing processes by creating solutions based on internet technologies
- Consulted with and assisted organizations within the Department of Defense

curiouscat.com - Arlington, Virginia (1996 to present) - Founder, Owner and CEO

- experiment with how to best use internet technology to serve customers
- write popular blogs on management, science and engineering

United States Office of Personnel Management - Washington, DC (1990 to 1997) - Analyst

- Created computer applications to improve customer service and the internal operations
- Created the Office of Retirement Programs web site and related infrastructure
- Lead the initial internet team for the Retirement and Insurance Service

Professional Experience

Since 1996 I have extensive work with internet development (focused on dynamic database driven web applications) and project management developing internet applications. Previously, I have served on boards of several Management Improvement organizations. I have spoken at national conferences on using management improvement methods and internet technologies to improve the performance of organizations.

see www.johnhunter.com/resume for more details